About Long Distance Riding

Long distance riding differs from other equine disciplines because horses and riders travel up to 100 miles or more either as a race or as a strictly timed event.

The distance can be broken down to be covered in one to three days depending on the specific event.

Usually three different events are known as "long distance" disciplines: Competitive Trail Riding; Endurance Riding and, Ride 'n' Tie.

The aim of all that participate in these events, whether vet, volunteer or rider, is to ensure the safety and health of the horse while competing.

Various long distance riding clubs and associations have their own rules that may vary slightly-
-check with the organization offering the event for specifics.
